

CONTRACT BID SUPPORT

If you are involved in or considering bidding for a long term waste collection or treatment contract then you're probably already aware that there are a multitude of technical and commercial issues that need to be fully understood and addressed as part of the tendering process and during the contract service period.

At Egniol we have more than 10 years of experience in providing Technical Adviser support to our clients, supporting their in house bidding teams at all stages of the tendering process. We understand the importance of designing a service solution that works for both parties and places technical and commercial risks clearly with the party best able to control and manage them.

OUR SERVICES INCLUDE:

- Environmental due diligence
- Service delivery strategy development
- Technology due diligence and selection
- Facility design and engineering support
- Planning and EIA
- Environmental Permitting
- Advice on Contracts for Difference
- Construction contract preparation and administration
- Project management of facility delivery
- Operational contract optimisation

We understand the need to have a robust approach to the operational requirements of the client and the development of the most cost effective service delivery solution. Bringing together our multi-discipline in house expertise, and our experience in working closely with financial and legal advisers, means that we can assemble bid support teams that will ensure that the technical elements of your bid are comprehensively addressed and fully aligned with the legal and commercial packages.
